

Only dogs and cats get heartworms.

Grounded or Unfounded?

FACT: Dogs are the typical hosts for heartworms, which are transmitted by mosquitoes, but the parasite also infects cats, wolves, coyotes, foxes, and other animals, such as ferrets, sea lions and, very rarely, humans (fortunately, human infections are highly unusual and cause no symptoms of illness).

BEST STRATEGY: All pet dogs, cats, and ferrets should be on a 12-month heartworm prevention program.

Protection is priceless.

Choose year-round heartworm prevention for your pet.
